

A Club of One: Passages From the Note-Book of a Man Who Might Have Been Sociable; With Marginal Summary (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from A Club of One: Passages From the Note-Book of a Man Who Might Have Been Sociable; With Marginal Summary A pretty good-sized drawer, locked and padlocked, was found filled with the manuscripts from which these Passages were taken. I have presumed to give them the title they bear, the author of them having departed this life. It is very evident they were not designed for the public. They were written purely for occupation, there is not a doubt of it. The author, a reader and thinker, though an invalid, could not be idle. He read and he thought, and sometimes he recorded. He has said some things that have not been said before, and has said them in his own way. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
